

Spatter Cones

These miniature volcanoes formed when blobs of molten lava were lobbed into the air during the last gasp of an eruption sequence that ended about 2,100 years ago. This image shows a close up view of this material, known as spatter, erupting from an active spatter cone in Hawaii. Craters of the Moon is well known for these beautiful volcanic features. Please help protect them by staying on trails.

